

My family and I oppose the Comm Banker's Assoc attempting to challenge Indiana's wonderful telephone privacy law. I find the fact that these companies need to "sell" products over my right to privacy insulting. I know how to contact them, they all have phones and websites. They certainly don't contribute and funding towards my telephone expenses, why should they be allowed to contact me, when I don't want to hear from them. Since this law went into effect, we are never bothered by unwanted calls. We love it, please don't start making acceptions. The law also helps prevent fraud from false phone and credit card companies.
